Re: Nypl, et al. v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., et al., No. 1:15-CV-09300 (LGS)

Dear Judge Schofield:

Pursuant to Your Honor's July 23, 2020 Order (ECF No. 607), we write on behalf of defendants Bank of America Corporation and Bank of America, N.A. (together, "Bank of America") to provide an update to the Court on whether Bank of America has any additional data that it can produce that would break down its retail FX transactions into transactions conducted by business end-users and transactions conducted by consumer end-users. The short answer is that Bank of America does not have any additional data that would provide this breakdown. This is because Bank of America's FX retail database does not record client information in a manner that would allow Bank of America to run reports showing which retail FX transactions were conducted by business end-users and which retail FX transactions were conducted by consumer end-users.

Respectfully submitted,
